Flashlight Maker, SureFire, Builds a Nearly Indestructible Pen

It's made from the same aluminum as their flashlights, but there is no hidden flashlight.

Fountain Valley, CA -- SureFire, LLC, manufacturer of the world's finest illumination tools and tactical products, has created a pen that belongs in the streets, on the battlefield, or in the pocket of anyone who truly appreciates a functional, beautiful American-made writing instrument. The new SureFire pen is a tactical yet stylish pen that blends melded lines and smooth writing with the superior strength one would expect from SureFire.

The SureFire Pen will be the first in a new product line from SureFire's Edged Weapon Division, helmed by renowned knife maker, Steve Ryan. This new product line of fine pens will provide a lifetime of quality that SureFire customers have come to expect. The SureFire Pen incorporates unique mechanisms and rock-solid construction which makes it ideal for any situation.

Like all SureFire products, the SureFire Pen is made to be used—hard. It's built to meet the needs of military, law enforcement personnel, as well as those in the board room. The SureFire Pen is CNC machined at SureFire's turning center in Fountain Valley, CA, from aerospace grade aluminum that's been Mil-Spec hard anodized—it's made in America. Seamlessly integrated into the tailcap is a rounded stainless steel window breaker that won't snag clothing. The tumble polished stainless steel pocket clip, tailcap, and tip resists wear, corrosion, and provides additional durability.

The durability and beauty of the SureFire Pen will ensure that it stays in your family for generations to come. The Schmidt® Technology easy FLOW ink cartridge glides effortlessly without smearing. To deploy the ink tip simply twist the pen one and a half turns—there's no cap to lose.

The SureFire Pen has an unassuming design with dimensions similar to that of most high-end writing instruments: 6.04" (15.34 cm) with the ink tip retracted, and it weighs in at 1.85 ounces (51 grams) with the ink cartridge in place. And the SureFire Pen is fully adjustable and accepts most ink cartridges between 3.875 and 4.25 inches long, so finding a replacement cartridge is not a problem. This pen is beautiful, well-balanced, and always at the ready in case of emergency.

For more information about the SureFire Pen visit SureFire.com or call 1-800-828-8809 and ask about the Pen, Model/SKU #: EWP-01-BK. Each individually serial numbered Pen is backed by SureFire's No-Hassle Warranty and has an MSRP of $125—cartridge included. Whether you dress in 5.11s or Brooks Brothers, this pen will fit your needs.
